

United: Caring for our loved ones living with dementia

By Gina Awad

Gina delivers heartfelt stories from those supporting people with dementia, be that spouses, children or otherwise in a sensitive but illuminating manner. These stories give great insights into the changes required to support a person with dementia, for example, communication styles, the home environment and even changes in relationship dynamics. Many of the participants display great understanding of how to support the person with dementia in a loving manner, ensuring that they are putting them first and enabling the person to remain living at home.

This is ultimately a story of love and friendship which highlights the ability of people to support and care for each other. The book is enriched by the beautiful illustrations, courtesy of award winning illustrator and cartoonist Tony Husband, which bring the stories to life.
